1. [] Kathy Nelson, in the office of Senator Stuart Symington, called to say the Senator was very anxious to see an Agency study on Communist activity in Cambodia dated May 1971. She understands that there were two versions--secret and codeword--and said the Senator was interested only in the secret version.

2. [] Dick Moose, Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff, called to say that in view of the interest in Cambodia he would like to talk to Sam Adams regarding Communist insurgency there. I said Adams was not the responsible officer in this area but I would be glad to see who could be available to talk with him.

I later called Moose back to say that [] was our expert on Cambodia and would be glad to see him early next week. Moose repeated his desire to speak to Adams. I said that since [] was the responsible officer in this field that was the best I could do for him and if he wanted to pursue his request for Adams, Senator Symington would have to call the Director. Moose said he would be back in touch.
